STATUTES

GOVERNMENT STRUCTURE

The Legislature, the National People's Congress or Quanguo Renmin Daibiao Dahui, is unicameral. It consists of 2,985 seats. Members are elected by municipal, regional, and provincial people's congresses to serve five-year terms.

In the Executive Branch, the President and vice president are elected by the National People's Congress for a five-year term (both are eligible for a second term). The Premier is nominated by the president, confirmed by the National People's Congress.

The legal system is based on civil law system derived from Soviet and continental civil code legal principles. The Legislature retains power to interpret statutes. However, the Constitution is ambiguous on judicial review of legislation.
LEGISLATIVE PROCESS

Only the National People’s Congress (NPC) and its Standing Committee (NPCSC) can enact law in the PRC. When citing a state note whether it is the “NPC” or the “NPSC” which enacted the law, its name translated to include the word “law,” the Chinese title transliterated into pinyin, and the date of enactment. Where citing to an old version of a law statute include only the date of enactment and the last date of amendment (if any) of the version used.

The two legal systems of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (HKSAR) and the Macao Special Administrative Region (Macao SAR) are exceptions to the legal framework of the PRC. The two are responsible for adding many unconventional and unprecedented traits to the Chinese socialist system.
