BACKGROUND AND LEGAL SYSTEM

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>LEGAL SYSTEM</th>
<th>Based on civil and Roman law. Elements of common law are also present in the legal system. The Supreme Court holds the power of judicial review over legislative acts. El Salvador accepts compulsory ICJ jurisdiction, with reservations.</th>

<td>POLITICAL SYSTEM</td>
<td>The Constitution of 1983 declares that the government of El Salvador is republican, democratic, and representative, as had the Constitution of 1962. The government is comprised of three branches: executive, legislative, and judicial. The military is not a constitutional branch of government yet exerts considerable influence over the governance of the country. The military is often the most immediate government representative for many Salvadorans.</td>

STATUTES

GOVERNMENT STRUCTURE
The unicameral Legislative Assembly (Asamblea Legislativa) has 84 seats. Its members are elected by direct, popular vote to serve three-year terms. The Legislative Assembly determines the statutory laws of El Salvador. The considerable powers of the legislature include: levying taxes, ratifying or rejecting treaties, regulating the civil service, declaring war and granting amnesty for political offenses or common crimes. The Legislative Assembly also approves the national budget in its final form and selects the president (chief justice) and magistrates of the Supreme Court, the leaders of the Central Electoral Council and Court of Accounts (Corte de Cuentas) along with the attorney general and procurator general.

LEGISLATIVE PROCESS
Legislation may be introduced by members of the assembly and the president. The Supreme Court may submit legislation pertaining to the judiciary; and local municipal councils, with regard to municipal taxation. A presidential veto of legislation passed by the Assembly may be overridden by a two-thirds vote of that body. The executive may raise constitutional objections to a law with the Supreme Court serving as the arbiter. If a law challenged by the president is ruled to be constitutional by the Supreme Court, the president is compelled to sign it into law.

CASE LAW

JUDICIAL OVERVIEW
The Supreme Court (Corte Suprema de Justicia) is the highest level of the court structure. Below it are the chambers of second instance (Cámaras de Segunda Instancia) or courts of appeal, and at the base are the local courts, Juzgados de Primera Instancia.

Supreme Court judges are selected by the Legislative Assembly. The president of the Supreme Court is the head of the judicial branch and coordinates the business of the Court. Magistrates of the Supreme Court are appointed to five year terms by the Legislative Assembly.

The next level below the Supreme Court are the chambers of second instance, or courts of appeal, which are composed of two magistrates, who hear appeals of decisions handed down in the courts of first instance. The courts of first instance are the foundational level of the legal system, and these courts hear both civil and criminal cases.
