Sheldon M. Novick is an accomplished educator, author, and scholar. He was born in New York City in 1941 and attended New York public schools, the Bronx High School of Science, and Antioch College. After graduating from college in 1963, he worked for Barry Commoner at Washington University, helping to organize the new Center for the Biology of Natural Systems. He served as associate editor and then editor of Environment magazine from 1969 to 1977. While at Environment he attended Washington University School of Law, and after graduating in 1977 left St. Louis to practice law, first as an associate with Milgrim, Thomajan, Jacobs, and Lee in New York City, and then as regional counsel for the USEPA in Philadelphia.

In 1987, Mr. Novick moved to Vermont, where he began his long association with Vermont Law School, as scholar in residence and adjunct professor of law and history. He has taught constitutional law, environmental law, and legal history. With two colleagues, Mr. Novick founded the Community Development Law Center, which provides assistance to small not-for-profit and locally owned enterprises.

Mr. Novick’s publications include The Careless Atom (1969), the first account of the hazards of civilian nuclear power, which has appeared in numerous editions in four languages. His Law of Environmental Protection received the American Book Publishers 1987 award for the best book on a legal subject. His Honorable Justice: The Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes was shortlisted for the National Book Critics Circle Award and received the American Bar Association’s Silver Gavel Award in 1989. Mr. Novick is editor of the Holmes Devise Edition of The Collected Works of Justice Holmes (1994). His two-volume Henry James (1996, 2007) received favorable, front-cover reviews in the New York Times and Los Angeles Times. He is currently at work on a study of James Madison’s constitutionalism.

Mr. Novick and his wife, Carolyn Clinton, live in Norwich, Vermont. They have a son, Michael, and Mr. Novick has a daughter, Melia Bensussen, from a previous marriage.
