CJ Larkin, a lecturer from the Washington University School of Law, speaks to the Women Mayors Group about different ways of negotiating conflict resolution in their community.

On Feb. 5, Washington University School of Law lecturer C.J. Larkin offered professional advice for women mayors on how to resolve conflicts through negotiation, pointing out the barriers women face and how to overcome them. Larkin’s talk was a feature of the quarterly lunch for women mayors, sponsored by the Sue Shear Institute and hosted by the Boeing Co. A dozen women mayors were in attendance.
