Michael Rühle
America and Europe: Mars vs. Venus?

Monday, 28 February 2005
Lecture: 3:00-4:30 p.m.
Room 310 – Anheuser-Busch Hall

Michael Rühle is Head of the Policy Planning and Speech Writing Section of the Political Affairs Division at NATO. His major responsibility is the drafting of speeches and articles for the Secretary General and other high-ranking NATO officials. In addition to his speech writing responsibilities, Mr. Rühle is a frequent briefer in NATO's extensive visitors program and at the NATO Schools in Germany and Italy.

Previously, Mr. Rühle has been a Volkswagen-Fellow at the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung and a Visiting Fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Washington, D.C. He is a member of the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS) and the German Atlantic Treaty Association.

Mr. Rühle has lectured widely on topics of international security in Europe and the United States. He also publishes frequently on contemporary security issues, particularly on transatlantic relations and the evolution of NATO, and is the co-author of a major book on strategic defense. Mr. Rühle holds an M.A. degree in political science from the University of Bonn, where he also co-founded a students group specializing on arms control simulations. He took part in strategic arms limitation simulations at Bonn University and at UCLA.
