Your Support

While still young, the Institute’s exciting programs of education, research, and community service are already helping to promote global understanding and to prepare our graduates to address the needs of a new international era. These are our contributions to peace, justice, security, and a better world for ourselves, our children, and generations to come.

It is our intention to evolve into one of the world’s premier international legal centers—an achievable goal, with adequate resources. We are immensely grateful to our many generous friends who have made the early success of the Institute possible.

How You Can Help

- Unrestricted Institute Gifts
  These gifts allow the director the flexibility to allocate funds to the Institute’s most pressing needs. Among other things, unrestricted gifts permit the director to move quickly to secure speakers of interest to the entire community or to design a program responsive to rapidly emerging issues.

- Special Institute Gifts
  These gifts are designated for specific purposes of particular interest to the donor. They can include sponsoring and naming a particular conference, an Institute publication, a speaker series, a debate series, or a visiting scholar program. A major gift can also be made to name the Institute’s physical facilities or to name the Institute itself.

Like other gifts to Washington University, all gifts to the Institute for Global Legal Studies are tax deductible. They are much appreciated and go far toward helping us promote the kind of constructive international understanding that remains our ultimate objective.

If you would like to discuss any of the many ways—including naming opportunities—in which you can support the work of the Institute, please contact the Institute’s director:

“My wife and I were delighted to sponsor the Institute’s grand inaugural colloquium on ‘The United Nations and the Protection of Human Rights.’ You managed to gather together some of the most extraordinary statesmen and other human rights authorities in the world, and the result was magnificent. We also appreciated your kind public recognition of our contribution. It’s clear to me that the Institute is rapidly ascending to the ranks of the world’s most renowned centers of international legal studies, and I can only say that we are proud to be part of its growing success.”
