While the world looked away as many as 70,000 civilians lost their lives, most at the hands of government shelling. This is the story of the final bloody weeks of the Sri Lankan civil war.

Award-winning filmmaker Callum Macrae will discuss his documentary film No Fire Zone and the international efforts to raise awareness through journalism and advocacy. Through footage recorded first hand by victims and perpetrators, the film examines the 26-year-long Sri Lankan civil war as told by the people who lived through it and chronicles the government’s final intensive assault against the Tamil Tigers and the atrocities committed against civilians.

Please join the lunch-time forum with Callum Macrae: pizza provided!