DOWNSTREAM
Untold stories on water, sanitation and wetlands – and why they matter

8PM TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28
WILSON 214, WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

JON SAWYER
Jon Sawyer, the Pulitzer Center’s founding director, reported from Bangladesh this summer on how the world’s most densely populated country is coping with sanitation and the provision of clean water, with a special emphasis on the challenges of rapid urbanization.

SEAN GALLAGHER
Photographer Sean Gallagher traveled across China this summer to report on disappearing wetlands and efforts to reverse the trend. His previous project, for the Pulitzer Center and National Geographic, focused on China’s desertification.

PETER SAWYER
The Pulitzer Center’s outreach coordinator has developed programs for using the Center’s 13 projects on water and sanitation issues to engage the broadest possible public, especially among middle school, high school and university audiences.

HTTP://PULITZERCENTER.ORG/DOWNSTREAM

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH:

INTERNATIONAL AND AREA STUDIES & SIGMA IOTA RHO

WITH ASSISTANCE FROM:

Environmental Law Society
Interdisciplinary Environmental Clinic
Whitney R. Harris World Law Institute