To Those Asked to Submit Recommendations: Washington University School of Law's admission procedures require applicants to submit individual letters of recommendation together with their completed application. Therefore, please enclose this recommendation in the envelope provided, seal and sign the back flap of the envelope, and mail this recommendation to the applicant. The applicant will submit this recommendation unopened to the School of Law.

The School of Law solicits recommendations that provide insight into the applicant's character and intellectual capabilities. Recommendations that simply report an applicant's test scores or scholastic record are not helpful to us since we already have access to that information. Instead, we welcome comments that detail the specific accomplishments and qualifications of an applicant and the specific facts on which such judgments are based.

Those recommendations that are particularly helpful to us in the admissions process respond to one or more of the following questions: What special interests, personal qualities, or motivations does the applicant have that distinguish the applicant from others? How does the applicant compare with other promising applicants? What information do you have about the applicant's ability to excel in a rigorous program offered in a foreign country? What information do you have that can help us assess this applicant's character and fitness to practice law? What other information do you have about the applicant that may be relevant and is not likely to be available from other sources?

If you use the back of this form to write your letter of recommendation, please sign the reverse side. If you submit a letter of recommendation on a separate letter on your letterhead, please sign the letter and attach it to this form.
