The first movie, The Nuremberg Trials: the Third Reich's Inhumanity to Man on Trial, is a dark film that graphically illustrates in stark images and uncompromising narrative the terrible cost of the wars of conquest and genocide waged by Nazi Germany. Sections on concentration camp horrors may be distressing to some viewers. Russian, original dubbed English version, released immediately after the conclusion of the 1946 trials in black and white, 57 minutes. This film is a rare video recording.

10:30-11:46
The second movie, Nuremberg, originally released as a motion picture in 1949, was produced by the Documentary Film Unit, Information Services, OMGUS, published in Washington, D.C., by the Department of the Army, and distributed by the National Audiovisual Center. This film is in black and white and is 76 minutes long. It is a documentary record of the trials of the Nazi leaders at Nuremberg, Germany. Nuremberg includes scenes from films made by the Nazis which were presented as the documentary evidence of the atrocities committed at concentration camps.
